Supporting and assisting these educators by providing constructive feedback individually from HoDs in both departments is an efficient strategy.

- Teachers are very grateful to the HoDs and the principal for their time, assistance, guidance, and motivation. By praising teachers, a good and encouraging atmosphere can be created. Teachers' work happiness and effectiveness can both increase if they believe they are valued and appreciated in the classroom and their workplace.
- Teachers who earn positive comments from their superiors and the principal are rewarded for their hard work. They are further encouraged in their professional development and contributions to the academic community by the possibility of attending conferences and preparing research articles.
- It's encouraging that initiatives are being taken to teach pupils about social awareness and human values in addition to the standard curriculum.
